While the plan has not been strictly compiled with in this regard, yet, — it can be shown that any one is entitled to a repount, it is believed the committee will waive this technical non-compliance and go into the matter. The books of Third Jefferson have been examined, but they do not throw any light on the subject, as they only show which of those who are regis-tered voted in the recent primary and not for whom they voted. The books show the narmes of some persons who are said to be dead, and others who have removed from the ward, but this is regarded as an oversight on the part of the former regis-trar in failing to strike them off.

a fare treat last-night in exciting g and instructive scenes. The first scenes shows a moose hunt in the ands of the far West, and the auditarts with the hunting party from y to the little branch lumber road to the hunting sand finally be seen and finally be appeared.

"The Arabian Nights" is the title of one of the scenes which will prove decidedly mystifying all this week, as the tableau is finely set, and the constant changes keep one guessing as to what beautiful spectacle will be shown next. It is a set of scenes showing a trick played by some way on a London policeman. The man dresses for a costume garden party and leaves his carriage some distance from the place. A policeman, "Bobby," thinking the man is an excaped lunntle, gives change and finally, when out of breath, ends by the man running into a park where the larty is being held.
"Benind the Stage" shows life as it is behind the scenes and the stage in a large and fashlomable French theatre in Paris. The star arrives and proceeds to her dressing-room, where several friends call on her. When she completes her act those one views the performance from the back of the stage.
"Burmer Boarders" is the very appropriate title of another interesting scene rhown. A lot of city folks go to the country and meet with enough troubles, all of which are brilliantly portrayed on the canwas, to make them agree to remain in the city for the remainder of their lives. These and many other views will be shown three times sach night this week, except Friday night, when there will be a potato race on roler skates, and a half-mille race for misses and girls.

Richmond Amusement Co.

After a long meeting, full of routine business, the Water Committee last night decided to recommend that water privileges be granted the Richmond Amusement Company at the West End Electric Park.

Every one favored the granting of the privilege, but there was a good deal of discussion upon the general subject of rates charged various classes of consumers. Major Allen thought they should all be uniform, and to this end the matter was referred to Superintendent Bolling for recommendations.

The committee took up various other matters, but they were all of a routine character, and without any special degree of public interest.

Night" Both Wonderfully PRODUCTION A REVELATION

Mr. Greet's "Malvolio" is Unsurpassed-Whole Company Excellent.

Street to the forest of Arden, and on that account the more glory is due Mr. Greet and his excellent company o players, who by sheer play of art, brought yesterday the mountain of Mohamet the forest of Arden, to Franklin Street. With none of the so-called accessions of the modern theatre, but playing in ture's theatre," under the shade of two great spreading trees, upon a primitive stage strewn with grass, with only sweet smelling cedar boughs as a background, with the intervals marked by the singing old English glees, Mr. Greet pre sented the great comedy of "As You Like It" as it had never before been playe

Rare Treat Indeed.

It would take more than printer's ink to paint a picture of the wondrously charming comedy of nature-naturally played-for each one of the audience saw with the imagination that was in it with the imagination that was in him, bounded by the limitations of his inate fancy, be that great or small.

That it was a rure treat, none can deny for the clever band of players with an art near akin to nature, banished the bricks and mortar, the noise and bustle of the surrounding city and swayed and played upon the passions of the audience as it liked.

is said Shakespeare once played), ending with the happy epilogue spoken by Rosalind, and a merry glee that died away as the players left the stage.

Mr. Greet objects to praise, and of criticism has no fear, but at least a simple word of appreciation may be said of his excellent "Touchstone" and of the charming Rosalind," of Miss Sybil the charming Rosalind," of Miss Sybi here, when he played with Mr. Mans field, was a delightful Orlando and, in-deed, the whole company of players de-served naught but praise.

"Twelfth Night in the evening was, if anything, more attractively played than was "As You Like It."
Darkness hil the houses surrounding the lawn; the night was exfect, the stars being out and the wind just strong enough to rustle the leaves of the trees that spread across the open stage.
From Arden the scene shifted to fllyria, but the grass-strewn stage, the background of cedar boughs and the scent of honeysuckle was the same as in "As You Like It."

There Sir Toby Belch: Sir Andrew Agnecheek, the forerunner of 'Bob Acres,' swaggered and swore: 'Malvollo' pompously strutted with his yellow legs and his many smiles, and Viola in doublet and hose kindled the fire of love in Olivia's breast and finally won the Duke's heart.

It was all so charmingly and perfectly acted that praise seems flat and commendation unprofitable, but certain it is that the 'Malvollo' of Mr. Greet was the perfection of art, a portrait drawn by a master's hand.

Miss Sybil Thorndike was quite as a master's hand.

Miss Sybil Thorndike was quite ay clever and as comely as Viola as she had been in Rosalind, and the Sir Toby of Mr. Sydney Greenstreet was as Falstaffian as one could wish.

Splendidly Balanced.

Mr. Greet's players are by far the best balanced company that has ever presented Shakespeare'e comedles in Richmond, and the promise made by Mr. Greet that he will return next year is something well worth waiting a year for fulfilment.

A large audience witnessed "Twelfth Night," and applauded the performance to the echo.

Mr. Greet will play to-day at the University of Virginia on the lawn between the chapal and the rotunda.

In Washington this week Mr. Greet will have a conference with Mr. Tucker, president of the Jamestown Exposition, regarding a scheme to reproduce the old Willamsburg theatre at the Exposition grounds and produce the old plays there. It is of interest to know that the dresses worn by Rosalind in Cella in the last act of "As You Like It," were once worn by Miss Mary Anderson, who presented them to Mr. Greet when she retired from the stage.

IDR. WILLIAMS ON HEALTH MATTER

Chairman Declares That Re-'As You Like It" and "Twelfth organization is a Mere Question Between Two Systems.

HAS NO PERSONAL AMBITION

Could Not and Would Not Be Chief Health Officer-Issue is Defined.

the special committee which recently reported on health conditions here, gave out an interview yesterday, in which the clearly defines the issue so far as he able to see it.

Dr. Ennion G. Williams, chairman of

Dr. Williams says the public mind should not be diverted from the real question and he goes on to contend that the matter of reorganization is a question between two approximations is a question between two systems.

He declares his belief that the board system would work well, as it has done in other departments, and says it is all felly for any one to say that he has any personal ends or ambitions in view in connection with the matter.

"So far as the matters between some members of the present board, on the one side, and the special committee of the order had a said Dr. Williams, "they may be discussed before the council and decided there. It is all right that members of the present board be given the fullest opportunity to answer to points in which they think instructions are insignificant compared with the question whether the health department shall be reorganized and health conditions are perfect and that there is no room for improvement should demand the continuance of the system as it is, I am anxious, however, that the public shall understand clear, that there is no room for improvement should demand the continuance of the system as it is. I am anxious, however, that the public shall understand clear, what the new health ordinance proposes to do.

"In the first place, it does not require that anybody be turned out of office or anybody put in.

Calls It Foolishness.

Calls It Foolishness.

Would Be Responsible.

Would Be Responsible.

"The commission would be responsible for the control of the health department. It would have practically no patronage and would, therefore, be removed as far as possible from politics. The commission presumably would be composed of sensible, honest citizens and could appoint as its wisdom night suggest the present incumbent or anybody else who might be considered fit for it after full inquiry and thought.

"What I want especially understood is that those of us who want the change are not fighting against or for any person of persons. We are asking a change of system. As we read the figures and facts, the old system has not worked well. The commission system has resulted admirably in other departments of our city government. Even if this were not so the health department is unique in its lack of patronage and is besides far more important than any other, and consequently peculiarly entitled to the application of this principle. Wherever it has been tried it has resulted well and grown in favor. Why should it not work well in our bealth department, the most important of all? A department intended to guarius and our children from disease and death is even more important than those which guard us against theves and fire." I do hope the public will keep clearly in mind that the pending question is not the vindication or the censure of any-body or the election or removal of any individuals or individuals, but is between a system which has proved a disastrous and fata failure in practice and a new system which has proved successful wherever tried."

Other Matters Possibly.

The managers and owners of the Virginia State Base-ball League will hold an important meeting in Murphy's Hotel Saturday night at 8 o'clock. Among other matters, one of the most important to come before its attention will be that of the present game schedule, over which Mr. Charles Bland, of the Portsmouth aggregation, has raised so much protest. Mr. Bland deems the present schedule unfair to some of the other clites, and wants to have it changed so that Portsmouth may have a few of the week ends. Norfolk and one of the other clites is siding with him in the matter, and it will probably arouse some important discussion Saturday night. But it is hardly likely that any change will be made, it may be stated on good authority. The selection of a successor to Mr. Wingard may also be brought up, and it was stated by an officer of the league last night that the name of Mr. "Dick" Duke will not be considered.

Mr. Jake Wells has arrived in the city, and he will be present to preside at the meeting.
